DEPARTMENT OVERVIEW

Overview

The aims of Religious Studies in Queensmead School are to develop skills pertinent to religious education, such as questioning, investigation, communication, expression and evaluation; and to promote the ability to make reasoned and informed moral judgements.

Students are encouraged to explore the ideas within their own religion, the religion of others and those of no religion at all.

Resources

Our teaching rooms have interactive Smartboards and we make regular use of the latest ICT software; as well as Google Drive. There are a wide variety of textbooks and resources available to staff and students for reference.

Teaching Groups

Religious Studies is a compulsory subject for Years 7-9. In addition we have large GCSE classes in Years 10 and 11. The uptake for the GCSE course next year has been extremely positive. We are hoping to launch RS A level for 2024-25 and are therefore looking to expand the department.

Current Courses

In Year 7, Religious Studies students learn about Judaism and Christianity. In Year 8, students will learn about Islam, Hinduism and Buddhism. In Year 9, students will learn about Sikhism, Humanism, the Christian sacraments as well as philosophical and ethical themes.

Our GCSE course follows the AQA syllabus Religious Studies A with a specific focus on the study of both Christianity and Islam.
